

We are currently seeking a Hematologist or Hematologist/Oncologist to join the practice of two general hematologists in Victoria, British Columbia, for the Fall 2013. Academic appointment is given through the University of British Columbia and the University of Victoria. This would be a possible joint appointment with the BC Cancer Agency. Candidates need to have a broad knowledge of benign and malignant oncology, work independently, be self-motivated and have a strong interest in patient care. Research and medical education opportunities are also available.

About us...

There are currently two members of this hematology team covering all aspects of benign and malignant hematology care on Vancouver Island. The estimated catchment area is approximately 900,000 people, with the majority of patients from the Greater Victoria area (population 400,000). We provide predominantly outpatient clinical care and consultative in-hospital care. On-call responsibilities are shared with medical oncology. Chemotherapy for malignant hematology is administered through the BC Cancer Agency, Vancouver Island Centre in Victoria. Our office has electronic medical records and shared office space is available. We are supported by a team of three hematopathologists, providing a full range of laboratory services. There is also a DVT clinic overseeing anticoagulation.

Victoria is a beautiful city, with a moderate climate, and surrounded by beaches and outdoor activities. It is away from the hustle and bustle of a major city, but still has a full complement of medical services. For further details, or if you wish to set up elective time, please contact us:
